In accordance with national law, the Danish Bar and Law Society (the “DBLS”) is obligated to audit and control Danish lawyers’ compliance with national provisions, including the provisions of the Danish Anti Money Laundering Act (the “AML Act”).

One such provision includes the Danish lawyer’s customer-related due diligence obligations, which includes the collection and verification of a client’s identity, and, where relevant and in accordance with section 11, part 2 of the AML Act, any natural person who is authorized to act on behalf of a client.
